Adaptive regeneration for resilient living spaces

The role of technological design in landscape defense between conservation and transformation

The scientific event aims to make a point on the perspectives related to the capacity of open spaces, and related infrastructures, to play a strategic role as a dynamic element in urban regeneration processes. Considering the various methodological and applicative aspects and sharing the concept of resilience applied to anthropized contexts, the event aims to develop critical reflections on innovative strategies oriented to the improvement of technological-environmental performance also in relation to climate change. This is to increase the capacity of open space to activate environmental and social processes of city revitalization within the delicate relationship between natural and built environments.
