In the evaluation of the comfort conditions of an indoor space, colour is one of the relevant physical environmental factors to determine the visual quality. The phenomenology of colour can be explained from the philosophy of perception. Active learning as an ecosystem in which space is one of the sub-systems; theories of evolution - orthogenesis and phylogeny of the learning space; neurodevelopment and evolutionary stages of development and the emotional and mental dimension of colour in the learning space are some of the issues explored during the Seminar.
